KALLIPOLIS GROTTO EXPECTS 20,000 GUESTS

Preliminary plans were made last night at a meeting of Kallipolis Grotto, at the New Willard, for the annual convention of grottoes from all over the United States, next June. It is expected between 15,000 and 20,000 persons will attend the convention, and Kallipolis Grotto will spend about $15,000 in the entertainment of the guests.

William F. Gude, chairman of the entertainment committee, outlined the tentative program at last night's meeting. It calls for sightseeing tours of the city, trips down the Potomac, receptions, dances and a big banquet.

Chairman Gude promised that he would exert the same energy and enthusiasm in making the grotto convention a success that he put forth on behalf of the G. A. R. encampment and other big events wherein he has played a prominent part.

FEDERAL BREAD PROBE MUST WAIT PRICE RISE

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday afternoon stated that it had no authority to institute an investigation into the bread situation until the bakers begin raising prices, as up to this time there had been a good bit of talk, but no definite action.

President P. T. Moran, of the local Chamber of Commerce, says that the people of Washington should pay more attention to the matter of food costs, and that the Chamber at its next session would give consideration to the bread problem.

President Moran thinks that the sixteen-ounce loaf should be standard, and that there should be a local law to that effect, but he is dubious as to whether such a law would be advisable at the present time, when bakers are forced to pay such enormous prices for flour.

SAVE MILK JARS AND AVOID PRICE INCREASE

So Producer's Head Advises, Also Citing Duplication of Routes.

That the conservation of milk bottles will no doubt prove the answer to the present agitation toward increasing the price of milk to distributors without affecting the retail price, is the opinion of Judson C. Welliver, chairman of the committee of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association.

This opinion is also borne out by Dr. W. C. Woodward, health officer of the District, who in a statement yesterday said: "I believe that milk production and distribution would be put on a more profitable basis if the dealers would abolish the practice of furnishing bottles without cost to the consumer. The customer who breaks or loses a milk bottle should be made to pay for it."

Another point raised by Chairman Welliver, in the nature of a suggestion toward the cutting down of delivery expenses, is that all over the city there are probably about twenty dealers who cover the same territory in the course of their delivery, whereas should the territory be equitably divided, or a fair system of exchanging customers negotiated, the dealers could probably cut their delivery costs 25 per cent.

This method has been tried with success in a number of large cities, where the results obtained have proclaimed its value. Whether local dealers could be induced to inaugurate such a system is purely a matter of conjecture, but it will be proposed at the joint meeting of the producers and distributors on Tuesday.

According to evidence in the hands of investigators of the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Justice, the distribution of milk in most of the large cities in the United States is in the hands of monopolies, and investigation is being made with the view of filing anti-trust suits.

The Department of Agriculture, which is already conducting an investigation of the cost of city cartage will pursue this new investigation into the cost of delivery of milk in conjunction with the first probe. It was announced yesterday by the department that hearings resulting from the investigations in New York State and New England would begin in about ten days.

'BANG!' GO STRAW LIDS, RAINY DAY ASSISTING

Summer Headgear Must Go Regardless of Temperature.

The straw hat gun went off yesterday, and millions of summer "Kellies" bit the dust.

Yesterday was the official funeral day for the "hay lids," and he who ventures out upon the public thoroughfares under one, between now and the official resurrection day next spring, will be charged by the public with "contempt of etiquette."

The last summer has been very accommodating to the pale members of the hat tribe. The sun has kissed them with its golden beams and the rain has doused them with its silver drops, and they all show a beautiful coat of tan. But alas, their reign is ended, and "King Kelly" now rules supreme.

The passing of the straw was observed and celebrated in various ways in the Capital. One merchant paid 50 cents apiece for the homeless hats, providing a new fall hat was purchased. He acquired several months' kinsling wood by the strategy. An old and tarnished straw hat makes an excellent stimulant for a fire. Another dealer gave the old hats to newsboys, who had great sport with them. Still another dealer, who in front of his store all decorated in straw.

For several years the open season for straws has started on September 15, and what the calendar says goes—the thermometer has nothing to say in the case.

CLARA BARTON LAUDED BY MRS. JOHN A. LOGAN

Accuses Present Red Cross Leaders of Belittling Her Memory.

Declaring that Miss Mabel Boardman and other members of the present Red Cross society had instituted a persistent attack on the late Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross, Mrs. John A. Logan, in an interview last night, said the present project of building a memorial to perpetuate the memory of Clara Barton had grown out of the refusal of the Red Cross Society to allow the mention of Miss Barton's name in the memorial building of the society.

"Clara Barton's work," she said, "extended from the beginning of the civil war until the time of the formation of the present Red Cross Society, during which time she brought the Red Cross idea from Switzerland and had it adopted by the United States."

"These attacks have been going on for years. They accuse Miss Barton of not keeping books during the time when she was at the head of the Red Cross. When a soldier is dying on the battlefield and crying for food and drink it is no time to be making out regulations and entries in ledgers."

"Red Cross officials persist in attacking this woman, who probably did more in her life toward relieving suffering humanity than all the Red Cross combined. The testimonials which we will have placed in the new memorial will do more to testify to her sterling worth than all the statements I could make."

WILL DISCUSS 8-HOUR LAW WITH PRESIDENT

Judge William L. Chambers, of the Federal Board of Mediation and Conciliation, will go to Shadow Lawn, N. J., next week to discuss with President Wilson the eight-hour workday law for railroad employees. The attitude of the railways and of the men affected will be considered.

The administration is said to realize that the railroads may attempt to defeat the measure through manipulation of trials and their loads, and that the men also through desire for overtime, may contribute to that end.

The railroads, it was said, may reduce the number of freight trains and increase the number of cars of each, thus necessitating slower time and making operation cost under the new arrangement appear to be oppressive and even confiscatory.

At the same time, it was stated, they would be transporting as much goods as under the present system with the ten-hour day basis.

The men, it was stated, have it in their power to obstruct and to delay, so as to increase the amount of their overtime, and thus assist in a possible attempt by the railroads to overthrow the legislation.

Thornton presiding, today gave a verdict for the defendant in the suit of Emma Williams, colored, against Joseph C. Gates, a plumber. The complainant sought to recover $5,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained by falling into a trench dug by defendant. The plaintiff was represented by Attorney John M. Johnson.

This case was heard in the same court last May and the jury was unable to agree.

MAN WITH HECTIC HOSE CAN'T REMEMBER NAME

Special to The Washington Herald.

New York, Sept. 15.—In Knickerbocker Hospital today is Norman Normand, who has an uncle with whom he quarreled. He wears purple hose and is a victim of amnesia. Well dressed and educated, he cannot remember his name or home.

Normand entered the West 125th street police station and calmly told the lieutenant he had forgotten his name and his home address.

After many questions he said he remembered calling on Miss Alveira Davis, who lives with her parents at the Hotel Ansonia. When Miss Davis was summoned to the hospital he had forgotten her.

"I met this young man several months ago, and last evening he called on me and spent an hour with my parents and myself," Miss Davis said. "He was introduced as Norman Normand, and said his address was 30 St. Nicholas avenue. During his visit he said he had had a quarrel with his uncle, who owns an automobile."

The police could find no uncle at the address given.
